Pioneers of Bushwick project features compelling photographic portraits and text of long-time Bushwick, Brooklyn residents by artist/ photographer Daryl-Ann Saunders. The series was started during the artist's two-year participation in SPARC (Seniors Partnering with Artists Citywide), a NYC art residency program that connects artists to city senior centers with workspace.

During her residency at Diana Jones Senior Center in Bushwick, Ms. Saunders created a small "pop-up" photo studio where she began creating studio portraits and collecting written text by current Bushwick residents living in the area since the 1970s. Many center and community members are included in this effort.

In explaining the inspiration for this body of work, the artist states, "The 1970's and 80's were notoriously difficult decades in Bushwick, marked by drug abuse, arson, crime, and gang activity. The Pioneers of Bushwick project commemorates residents that persevered, raised families and contributed to a rich cultural tapestry during those times and up to its current resurgence.

Their contributions will now be in evidence within Bushwick history to be considered by both new and long-time residents. And as this artwork is viewed, it is hoped it will stimulate dialogue, not just about Bushwick and its history, but also about topics of aging, human value, perseverance, self-worth, cultural experience."

Ms. Saunders is a professional and fine art photographer. Her images have been published worldwide, are exhibited regularly and held in public and private collections.
